Movies From Our Other Studios

Dan O'Connell Reflecting on 700 Movies

I started keeping my talent releases in a single file folder, having no idea that I'd soon grow to having enough movies to require a whole file keeping system. For me, reaching 700 movies is a story about survival. When Girlfriends Films opened for business, there were a lot of small, fledgling companies. Of those, none that I know of have survived.

From the beginning, I tried to do things differently from the big companies, who all seemed to be following each other with what I considered to be mindless sex fests without any attention paid to relationships or seduction, instead aiming to a target audience they assumed had a low and very primal intellect. Hence, two things have appeared at the top of every box cover Girlfriends has ever produced: First is our motto "For fine people with curious hearts and minds". The other is the very simple heart logo that is designed to suggest both love and seduction. In the beginning, when I was packing and shipping all the mail orders myself, I included a hand-written thank-you with every order.

I did a lot of reinvesting in the company, which ultimately paid off big time. While they didn't necessarily provide any more profit than our other movies, making movies in Europe and producing more-costly and complicated movie series such as Road Queen and the elaborate Girls in White all helped to set Girlfriends Films apart from the others. Another thing we did right was our charity program, which each month let a performer select her own charity that we'd give $1,000. Not only was it the right thing to do from a charitable standpoint, but it is still something that adult businesses need to do and publicize if we are going to gain the acceptance of the world at large. We have the world's largest market – everyone who enjoys sex – but we have our biggest annual trade show in a couple of hotel rooms. That's ridiculous. Our trade-show week should be too big for Las Vegas to handle. And it's our industry's own fault that it isn't, and that we are still reviled by the general public. The tube sites and other outfits that steal content and put it out there for free – where nearly any 8-year-old can access it – have been the biggest and worst abusers in this regard.

We've been fortunate to have our best-ever talent pool over the past few years. When Girlfriends started out in the year 2001, Jim South and his World Modeling Agency was the sole store for finding talent. It wasn't long before other agencies cropped up. And it slowly became more acceptable for talent to do this.

I've made the vast majority of Girlfriends Films movies, somewhere north of 500 of them, with Michael Bisco doing nearly all of the others. The most difficult part – but one of the major factors in allowing us to make it to 700 movies – is that each one has a story line. Writing those scripts has been the most tiring and consuming part of the process for me. It requires a plot, characters and a seduction. While I've never shot a script twice, I made things a little easier for myself by making movie series where the story line and lead characters continue from one movie to the next, much like a television series. An example is the Road Queen series, in which Deauxma drives her customized and pink 1951 Ford around the desert Southwest, picking up girls and encountering the unusual. This very successful series went to Volume 35 until Deauxma retired from the business. Also, nearly all of my movies center around the snooty, old-money town of Thornhill, which give them a sense of continuity and familiarity. Better scripts and the fantastic talent we're getting have made our movies better and better.

Our biggest movie series, of course, has been Women Seeking Women, which is the most awarded series in the history of porn. This week I just finished shooting Volume 150 in that series. The good fortune of producing 700 movies rests in the hands of many people. It could not be done without GFF's employees, our distributors, our final customers and especially our talent. It takes a courageous soul to get nude and have sex for all the world to see. Few people have the nerve to do that. I have great respect for talent and it has always bothered me that so many people see them and our industry negatively. I've met many wonderful people in this venture! And on top of that, we've made many customers very happy. If laughter is the best medicine, orgasms can't be far behind.

Reaching 700 movies makes me really excited for number 1,000! Based on our current release schedule, that will happen around the year 2024. I want to make that one! I promise you it'll be extra special! My best ever!

Mindi Mink Interview

by Don Juan DeMarko

As we began this exclusive interview with adult film star Mindi Mink, I simply must include how these words came about. Interviewing the "ladies of our dreams" is as nerve wracking as a fan might think. These are women who are simply the most drop dead gorgeous women on the planet and they put in a show like no other in the world. I here and I were having a casual conversation about kindness. Something began to form between the interviewer and the interviewee. Mindi is a woman who has worked in the corporate world, as I do now. As we chatted we compared our views on the way that people see kindness as weakness and how they truly believe that they simply must be a piece of shit to their fellow human being to succeed in life. Mindi is a human who is known by people in the industry for her big heart and compassionate ways. She is a performer unlike any other. She is known for creating a more sensual side of adult cinema that some in the industry thought could never work. With the success she has seen since her first day in the industry Mindi was simply proving everyone wrong who thought there was only one path to walk in life and success. That is what truly shaped this article, an artist who simply defies what the term "adult performer" means in the best of ways. That is where we begin.....

Don Juan DeMarko: Well, I am simply going to say, whenever I am asked where my kindness comes from, I will just say, "I'm following Mindi Mink's lead."

Mindi Mink: (Sweetly Laughing) All right, I am simply ready when you are.

Don Juan DeMarko: So of course, I have always wanted to know what your definition of fetish is as woman of such sensuality? Also, what is your view of fetish in general? What is it that gets you going in terms of both the business and your personal passions behind closed doors?

Mindi Mink: I think you are right; everybody has their own interpretation of fetish. Everyone's view can be different. I have had people ask me that before. Sometimes in the past I've said I do not even know if I have a fetish. For me personally, a fetish is in my mind. It's something that is very specific, that is either done to you, or that you enjoy doing to someone else that turns you on. It is something that brings you a sense of excitement, wetness in my case being a female. It is a sexual turn on you know. It can be anything, even just a thought in your mind. I have learned through this industry, that yes, a fetish can be simply something that is in your mind. I think most people think it has to be where you are touching, feeling and just putting your hands on someone's body. It can actually just be a thought. So that is my definition of a fetish, something that simply makes your cock hard or makes your pussy wet and turns you on. Now my fetish, my personal fetish until I became a little older, was tease and denial. Though for me, being teased and when I say being teased, I mean the most light, gentle touch that someone can give. Finding that sensation is not easily found. Some people want to push too quickly, some people want to rub too much whatever the case may be. When it comes to my fetish, it is that super light touch, then pulling away that creates this sense within my body that builds up and tingles. The tingle is so intense at times that I can begin to feel my pussy begin to throb. I can literally feel the wetness coming just from the lightest of touches. The part that really gets me going is having all of that happen and then having someone pull away for a few minutes, they leaving me alone to where that feeling of wanting more and more just builds up. So it is that tease that really gets me. Tease me, then don't give me too much, deny me. I want to be denied. I simply do not want you to give more until I ask for more. That is harsh for a lot of people, because they are excited and they just want more and to get some release and I just must tell them, "not yet!" It is that build-up feeling that I just can't get enough of.

Don Juan DeMarko: Oh, my goodness, you said it to a tee. The best example I can give, I think is with people in the business, we have a way of seeing sexuality and sex in general at many angles. Sex, in what we would call the "normal" world is something "speedy" if I were to say it

Girlfriends Films veteran MILF performer Mindi Mink was featured in an interview for Issue 10 of Fet-Erotica, where she talks about working with Girlfriends Films and director Dan O'Connell

How Do You Know You're Gay

How do you know you're gay? I think about it often. I get asked this constantly, followed by many questions and comments such as, "Have you ever been with a man?" or "Maybe you just haven't found the right guy yet." I think that this is one of the reasons that people fear coming out. It almost seems like a smack in the face, and a better way of asking "are you sure you know who you are?"

I never quite understood the question to be honest; maybe because I always just knew. It's a lot like asking, "How do you know you're straight?" Surely, you just do. You probably always have. It's something that comes as a part of who you were created to be - a part of your Identity. Who knows, maybe some people have never questioned it simply because of what they've been taught from the beginning - that men are created for woman and woman for men. Maybe you have questioned it after finding someone of the same sex attractive... but you likely will know at the end of the day who you could be in a relationship with - whether it's one, both, or any gender - which overall helps define your sexual orientation.

I think the hardest thing for me personally about coming out was learning to accept the part of me I knew many people wouldn't. I hid apart of my identity to stay consistent with social norms. We're taught growing up to love and accept thy neighbor, but often criticize them the second they don't fit into our definition of the norm. Thankfully, with time, I realized that the part of me I tried so hard to deny is the very part of me that makes me so proud, and allows me to accept myself and be open within the LGBT community. Earlier this month (October 11) was the annual National Coming Out Day. If you're afraid to come out, this is a day where you have a large community to surround yourself with and let you know you're not alone. People share their stories on various social media platforms, reassuring that even though they may have been scared, coming out was ultimately worth it. Those of us that are out and open about our sexuality want to scream, "Welcome to our world! You have nothing to be ashamed of!"

Whether you decide to come out or not, someone is always going to be there to tell you that who you are is not okay. You can't change these people. You can't necessarily make them see a perspective that they don't. Some people just don't get it, and that's okay. Coming out is a continuous process; once you do it, you'll have to do it again, and again, and again - because coming out never stops. Thankfully, it only gets easier.
