Bree Daniels Celebrates 8th 'Porniversary'

Upon the release of 'Please Make Me Lesbian 16' starring Bree Daniels, she announced the anniversary of her 8th year working in adult film. In those 8 years Bree has appeared in many Girlfriends productions and we are honored that she is part of the Girlfriends Films family and a valued member of our talent roster.

Upon hearing the announcement, Please Make Me Lesbian 16 director B. Skow said, "I had looked forward to shooting with Bree for quite some time. And when it finally happened she did a great job!"

Girlfriends Films founder Dan O'Connell offers these words about working with Bree Daniels:

"Bree Daniels has appeared in nearly every movie series we've ever done, and worked with nearly all of our most popular performers. Bree has always lived out of state and made occasional trips to Los Angeles. We've both lived in the same areas of Montana and she attended the same high school as my mom did many years before, so our tracks have crossed each other's countless times. She doesn't make many trips to L.A. but we always try to shoot her when she's here. I'm guessing I've written and directed close to 50 scenes featuring Bree.

Bree has shot with Shyla Jennings several times for us, dating back to 'Lesbian Bridal Stories 5' in 2011. We usually don't pair the same performers twice but they are good friends with natural chemistry. As a director, that is something I cherish, so it was great to shoot them together again for our recently released Women Seeking Women 148. It is rare to have just one of them in town, and having both in town to shoot at the same time goes against all odds. But the heavens smiled and lined up the stars perfectly for this one.

Bree has been not just a great performer but is among our most dependable and level-headed girls. She always comes to our Girlfriends Films' sets ready to work and puts out a full effort. She's been a blonde at times and a redhead at other times, but either way she is strikingly beautiful and has a unique look. Sometimes you have to look at performer photos twice to see who it is, but not with Bree. Having worked with her so many times, she's one of the few girls I've who I've given an ongoing character and persona. I love to play her character as a rather comedic girl who is a braggard but gets caught not being so clever or accomplished, after all.

Other performers Bree has done great Girlfriends Films' scenes with include Samantha Ryan, Zoey Holloway, Angela Sommers, Lily Carter, Syren DeMer, Scarlet Red, Jessie Andrews, Valentina Nappi, Anikka Albrite and Reagan Foxx. I very rarely shoot a three-way but did one with Bree in 2011 for 'Please Make Me Lesbian 7'. She was with Cherie DeVille and Sally Charles, a sensational Australian performer who made only two short trips to America to shoot. That scene was absolutely amazing! Bree worked Sally over good, putting her into catatonic state, which in turn made my eyes bulge.

It was one of those very rare times when I wondered if the scene should be stopped. Sally turned out to be fine and really enjoyed herself.

The scenes I've directed number in the thousands, but that is one of my all-time best.

Not very many in the adult-industry talent pool make it eight years. One has to be physically durable, smart, very attractive, friendly, emotionally strong, resourceful, low drama and, of course, be great at sex. Bree is all those things and more. She reminds me of a hardy Montana cowgirl although very few of those would have the courage to take their clothes off and have sex with another woman on camera. I love you, Montana girl, and congratulations on your 8th year!" – Dan O'Connell

SIGNS THAT YOU MIGHT BE DATING A LESBIAN.

It never really occurred to me that after coming out as a lesbian there may have been signs to look back on in my previous relationships with men that could have been clear statements I was gay even before I was consciously aware of it. My ex-boyfriend (now great friend) always jokes with me that he was an awful boyfriend at the time, and that he knows he's the reason I "turned gay"; I think that's his way of feeling better about the fact he didn't see it when he was with me just as much as I didn't see it for myself. Him and I had dinner the other night and I decided out of pure curiosity to ask him "as an outsider now looking in – if you were to really look back at our relationship what do you think are some of the biggest clues that should have given up the fact I loved woman pretty quickly"? I was thinking he would have answered with a remark on how much I talked about girls being attractive but surprisingly enough the first response I got was much more detailed than any words I ever spoke.

He laughed pretty hard before finally muttering it out "I should have known you were gay immediately when you wanted to borrow my clothes (my shirts specifically) and not just to sleep in. Like, your wardrobe started to become better fashion than mine – and you were wearing nothing but the boy's section in clothing stores." . . . In all honesty, he isn't wrong. I became obsessed with fashion, but not female fashion. Gentlemen, if you are dating a female who likes to wear your clothes for more than the purpose of sleeping in them or lounging around in them – you might want to start questioning her sexuality. I think the idea of wearing your boyfriend's shirts when going to bed is somewhat enduring – but I also know I was wearing his clothes with the ideas on "if I were a boy this would look even better. . ."

I guess it could be pretty questionable on rather or not the girl you're sleeping with is thinking about sleeping with other women . . . especially if you're still able to get a blow-job with no complaints fairly easy. Sex wasn't a very common thing to happen in my past relationships but that doesn't mean I wasn't getting him off or that I played prude. Most of my relationships I was quite giving; sure, this partly comes from really liking to please others and getting turned on from turning my significant other on, but if we're being completely honest . . . I also just wasn't thrilled with the idea of being touched by a man. I wish what I was typing could be projected loudly to the people who won't read this. Men, pay attention to your women; You may think you're lucky with how often your girl is willing to drop down and give you head but be careful not to realize she could just be over compensating to avoid sex as well as having you touch her as much as you'd like. If you're trying to be more hands on with your girl and she seems hesitant I would most definitely question her sexuality.

We've all heard the phrase actions speak louder than words – in my case, this came to be a very true statement . . . but I've got to say, my words held no less value to further prove the fact I was gay than my actions did. Every other beautiful girl I saw I was "joking" about having her sit on my face. My boyfriend at that time thought I was just doing the most in terms to play with his sense of imagination and tease him, but knowing I was able to get as descriptive as I possibly could about being naked with another female in bed and become that easily wet was just another subconscious way of taking my true wants and vocalizing them enough to perhaps become true one day. Hell, the way I invested my imagination in dirty talk about girls all together compared to the way I actually dirty talked to him really should have been enough reason to question why there wasn't a rainbow flag being waved in the air directly above my head.

The signs you might be dating a lesbian are a lot clearer than you probably think. When you search too hard for something you sometimes miss the truth to what's right in front of you – Like the possibility that your girlfriend would much rather have another girlfriend, or that your girlfriend would much rather be going down on another woman for her enjoyment – not yours. I'm not saying any of these things above actually indicate that your girl is in fact a lesbian, but I am saying if it turns out to be true you can let her know I'm single.
