GIRLFRIENDS HAS BEEN NOMINATED BY THE 2018 INKED AWARDS: STUDIO OF THE YEAR & BEST GIRL/GIRL SCENE (ROMI RAIN & JENNA SATIVA, NETSKIRTS 17.0)

Girlfriends Films received two nominations for the upcoming 2018 Inked Awards presented by Inked Angels. The nominations were announced July 9, and included two for the all-girl studio - Studio of the Year and Best Girl/Girl Scene for Romi Rain (Inked Awards Female Performer of the Year 2017, 2015) and Jenna Sativa in Netskirts 17.0. The Inked Awards are scheduled to take place November 3, 2018.

Girlfriends Films was the only all-girl studio to ink a nomination in the "Studio of the Year" category. Upon hearing the news, Moose, president of Girlfriends Films was ecstatic. "To be recognized in a mainstream dominated category is such an incredible honor for myself and our whole team. Congrats to all the nominees and to our amazing directors, cast and crew! Girlfriends fans who have been with us from the beginning know we have worked hard to build an all-inclusive brand in a very niche market while maintaining the highest standard of quality entertainment. We are truly thankful and incredibly stoked to be included in this year's noms."

Dan O'Connell, founder of Girlfriends Films and director of Netskirts 17.0 was equally delighted. Reflecting on what it was like working with Romi Rain and Jenna Sativa on their nominated scene, O'Connell says, "I have never worked with a performer who has more energy than Romi. She goes at it hard and long, especially with the grinding. Putting her with Jenna Sativa - who is also a top performer - was a no-brainer. Both are aggressive as well as highly energetic."

The director goes on to compliment Rain's acting skills, "Really, I think Romi is one of the few girls in the business who could crossover into mainstream acting. And she really needs to be doing hair commercials! She is beautiful and talented. Romi is one of those rare performers who gives me back more good dialogue than what the script calls for. I usually cast her as a tough girl but I also give her character a comedic side as she can do that quite well, too."

The winners of the Inked Awards will be announced November 3. Fan voting in select categories runs July 12 - August 2.

HOW I FEEL ABOUT THE TERM “LIPSTICK LESBIAN”

“I mean, your hair isn’t cut short, and you don’t really dress like a boy, so you’d be considered a lipstick lesbian, right?” If you’re asking me honestly, the idea of categorizing lesbians into subcategories based on their appearance is somewhat degrading and a little ignorant. I mean, of course at the end of the day creating stereotypes is inevitable and most of the time these stereotypes that our created come out to be true - but just as the famous saying goes “Never judge a book by its cover.” The main issue with subcategorizing lesbians with different terms such as “dyke”, “butch”, “lipstick lesbian”, and even the new-aged label of “chapstick lesbian” is that although this is the appearances they give off, many will believe that what’s on the outside is also carried from within, when in fact I know many lipstick lesbians that have tougher personalities than those labeled a “dyke” or “butch”.

I can’t speak on the behalf of all lesbians, and maybe my opinion comes from a strong place of being labeled a lipstick lesbian so many times when I am in fact not one, but I think putting the label “lipstick lesbian” on a feminine looking lesbian takes away any stand still point they have in wanting to be more masculine. Just as someone who appears a little more dominate gets weird looks when they choose to be more soft on the outside. Though the original definition of a lipstick lesbian is defined as this: A lesbian who favors a glamorous, traditionally feminine style; i.e. wears dresses, high heels, makeup, carries purses, has long hair, ect. I believe has changed in many ways since the term was originated in the 1980’s. Yes, these lesbians still enjoy all the girly things. but many of them aren’t so devoted to the look of being outrageously feminine anymore. We may be wearing high heels, but odds are we are matching them to the button up shirt we bought in the mens department of our favorite store. We may have cut our hair short, but the highlighter we applied with our full set of makeup is still going to attract the light. A term is a term, but it doesn't define you and half the time we throw a term on someone we hold them captive in a box to mold them to that stereotype.

Lipstick lesbians are looked at as if they can't hold their own, or they need someone catering to them most of the time, but truth be told I have met plenty of lipstick lesbians who ride out being a top better than most dominate looking lesbians. Just because a lesbian doesn't look butch, or act like a dyke (whatever that means) doesn't automatically deem them as a lipstick. I might wear a dress but you'll sure as hell catch me wearing converse with them. My hair might be long but the odds of you seeing me with a full set of makeup on is going to be extremely rare. I may have the sensitivity and emotions of what is considered to be more feminine but nine out of ten times I'm going to be the one topping someone in the bedroom, and for what it's worth . . . you'll definitely never see me carrying a purse.

Another highly misconception about lipstick lesbians is that they usually date someone a little more masculine and if that be the case they are often questioned as to why they wouldn't just date a boy. Out of all the misconceptions about labeling of fem lesbians, this is probably the most misleading and aggravating of them all. Our sexuality is based upon our feelings and emotional attachment, so regardless of the outer appearance in who we are dating, we are aware of the female ora circling - butch or not - and when the time arrives that you meet a lipstick lesbian dating another lipstick lesbian just remember that we are not dating each other for your enjoyment. We are, one again, dating because to us the emotional attachment comes to higher grounds than the sexual attraction and appearance.

VISITS THE GFF SHOOT HOUSE

Take a tour of the Girlfriends Films shoot house with X Critic and the man who started it all at GFF – Dan O’Connell!

X Critic editor Don Juan DeMarko received a warm welcome from Girlfriends Films founder and movie director Dan O’Connell. According to DeMarko it was the chance of a lifetime. “Getting to see the Girlfriends Films house was truly a dream come true in the most literal sense possible,” he said. “To see the Lamoyne hotel come to life and so many other Girlfriends Films series was something that I know that I will never forget.”

Part one of this exclusive feature highlights X Critic spokesmodel Ambriel Willow in several photos from behind the scenes of the shoot house.
