Think you know all there is to know about girls who like girls? Our in-house columnist S.Tylene gives insight on how to impress a girl on a first date.

Dating is such a weird concept; We choose a person, set aside our time for them, plan out the night, spend the money, and if all goes well - under the intense expectations that we've set up for ourselves- we'll find we're lucky enough to do it all over again with the same person a second time. My generation has made anything "dating" related a little hard. We say we're "hanging out" so that we can avoid the real work it takes to do something nice for someone, we avoid having to call it "a date" just so that we can keep our options open for someone or something better, and on the off chance we actually like the person we're taking out on a "date" . . . we usually end up sleeping with them that first night. It's hard to really impress anyone anymore - we are so hard on ourselves, bored with the person we're with, or find a reason to be uncomfortable when someone does finally impress us and treat us right. Again . . . what a concept. With this all being said, knowing and understanding the way our generation works, the real question still lays: How do you impress a girl on a first date?

I recently was taken on a date by a girl where letting go of my need to control felt fairly easy due to her confident nature and immediate sureness that I'd be impressed. Prior to this, her and I hadn't met in person, nor did we exchange many text messages/DM's on social media.(I find that this actually ruins the true nature of getting to know someone new).

HOW TO IMPRESS A GIRL ON A FIRST DATE

The majority of how we spoke was through the phone and with that - It already felt much different than any other dating scenario I had been set up for (There is surely something more personal about being familiar with the sound of someone's voice before stepping into the space of meeting them.) Confidence and being sure of yourself . . . that's a major turn on. Not just that, but it gives you this full blown reassurance that the person you're investing your time in is actually interested in you and not just the act of dating someone/possibly getting laid. First rule of impressing someone: Stand tall. Be bold, and call the shots. Be so sure that even if a girl wants to say no she is outweighed by her own curiosity.

When you are asking someone on a date you want to make it light, fun, flirty and all around trusted. In case you missed that - you want to make it flirty. Anything too serious can give off an intense energy that makes people uncomfortable. No one likes feeling like they are under pressure, or expected to behave a certain way. Be flirty, but know and understand your boundaries. I was exceedingly surprised and impressed by the way this date went. If I'm being frank, I wouldn't really called lesbians the most romantic. Or the most patient when it comes to getting a girl in bed - we tend to push our limits, be a little over the top, and attach ourselves at the first sign of anything good. I was taken to an open space in a park, on a picnic and the first sentence spoken upon getting there was "I didn't want to take you to a loud bar or restaurant where I couldn't hear you talk, so I figured somewhere more open and outside was best." Second rule on impressing a girl (and getting them naked in bed on the first date): Make them feel secure about wanting to hear the things they say. Make them feel valid. Make them feel important so that they feel incontrol of the choice to get naked with you when they do.

So far we've covered that in order to impress a female on a date you must: stand tall with confidence and let them be heard by validating them. Two very sure points on how to gain not only a second date, but also a space to get to laid. I am not an expert past this when it comes to asking a female out, most of the time I just thrive on luck. The reality of it is, we all just want someone to be real and forward. We don't want our time wasted, and we want someone who strikes our curiosity rather than our need to be unpleased.
