WHEN A LOSS BECOMES AN UNEXPECTED GAIN

LOSING A GAME DOESN'T ALWAYS HAVE TO BE DEVASTATING!

By Serene Siren

Have you ever been playing a game, whether a video game, board game, poker game, or other such activity - and completely lost your cool? Perhaps it was because someone cheated, or had “aim-bot”, which turned you into a sore loser. Even the utmost levelheaded human can suffer from “frustration-fury” after losing an important game. These impulsive rage sessions happen most notoriously when playing online video games with other people. On such games, most likely with people from all over the world, there is often a ton of smack-talk meant to get the other players irrationally upset. Some users will try to find triggers and taunt players maniacally; while others are purely outraged they’ve lost because they felt like they deserved to win. No matter the case, this type of sudden anger may be more common than you might think within the gaming community, and there are many clips of individuals going completely crazy after suffering a defeat. You can find such clips of all types of people crashing their stuff while cussing up a storm, or punching holes in walls, or destroying their TVs. I have personally seen perfectly normal and chill people do this utter flip and switch where in one moment they’re having a blast on their games, and then the next, they’re mad and bitter! It can be quite the rollercoaster. Many times, after a big freak out, the angered will determinedly get right back on that game (after they’ve replaced anything that’s broken) to find and annihilate those that thwarted them. It can make you wonder, is there something about us humans that enjoys pissing people off, alternatively does it feel good to get mad? Or are we just used to it and it’s become acceptable? If we continue to subject ourselves to these forms of entertainment and excitement, choosing them often, is it a choice or a trend? All are much bigger existential questions than I’m able to answer, but what I can do as a budding writer-director, is take this topic and turn it into a fantasy. What would happen if these gamer-ragers were two hot girls that turned their rage into some hot lesbian sex?! They could calm down by sucking on each other’s breasts like pacifiers and silence each other’s trash-talking with cunnilingus. In the next series of movies I’m directing for Girlfriends Films there is a scene where the stars just go completely nuts from their defeat on a video game. They crash and bang things around, getting into each other’s faces. They get so turned on by passion and rage, they channel it into their sexual abilities, as the two try to make each other cum. There are not many better ways to make up for a freak-out than to get your freak on! Seems like the ultimate fix, right? You’ll have to find out if it’s a viable way to settle a dispute when this scene becomes available... soon on GirlfriendsFilms.com where gaming gone wrong ends just right.

GIRL CRUSH: HOW TO TELL WHEN YOU HAVE ONE

“What is considered a “girl crush” and how can you tell if you have one?”

Have you ever wondered, “If I have a girl crush, am I lesbian?” or “If my girlfriend is crushing on another female does this mean she is a lesbian?” If you’re in a phase that’s even remotely close to questioning rather or not you like girls, these are some questions commonly asked. Figuring out your sexuality could be frightening, but even moreso it could be the best, most carefree and fun thing you can do for yourself . . . It could also be the most carefree and fun thing you can do for a girl who already knows she likes girls.

I didn’t come to a conscious awareness that I liked girls until after I had been cuddling my best friend to sleep at night, holding her hand, and having her pressed tightly against my body as often as I could, and as much as she wanted me too. I’m not quite sure why these things at the time never raised the question in my mind “do I like girls?” or why the thought never popped up that I might be a lesbain due to having dreams about caressing the inner thighs of her with my tongue. I knew at the time that I wanted to be intimate, that I needed to feel close in a way that was more physical than it was mental, but even with that - it still never raised the question, “Is this a girl crush?” I just assumed when you have a best friend it’s normal to be “intimately close” especially if neither of you were known to be even slightly attracted to other females.

About a year afterward, I met a girl who had no shame or hiding who she was or what she wanted. She was out as bi-sexual and fully proud of it. It didn’t take much time to become close to her - shortly announcing afterwards that she was my “best-friend” only this time around I knew my dreams of wanting to have her soft lips against my skin, and my hands undressing the clothes off her body meant something completely different: “Could I actually like girls?” Seconds after this question was raised, my mind went back to the memory of my last best friend and how we snuggled up in bed, face first, nestled into each others’ chests. The occasional hand under the back of the shirt, tracing each others’ skin just so we could feel closer than what our bodies actually allowed us to be.

For me, having those dreams and desires about a girl showed I was indeed having a girl crush and it was far beyond just a fun fantasy in my head. My sexual orientation was being altered into something more than just the idea of being with another woman. Having a girl crush doesn’t mean you’re gay; having a girlcrush can simply mean you just like what you like and there is nothing past that. It’s much easier to figure that crush out when you know the other person is also in a position to feel the same. So talk about it, act on it, have fun with it. Nothing can be sweeter than having a fantasy of two females (one of them being yourself) come to life, even if you decide it isn’t your everyday life.
